By Alvin Shuster SAIGON, Scpt. 1 (NYT).—The South Vietnamese government South Vletnamese government announced tonight that Vice-President Nguyen Cao Ky's name would be kept off the ballot in October and that the presidential election would go on with only one candidate, President Nguyen Van Thieu.

The decision was made, in effect, by Mr. Thieu himself, although the government communique suggested it had been based on a Supreme Court ruling.

Informed sources said that the court, iu a letter sent to the president this morning, had left it to him to decide whether there would be one or two names on the ballot.

Protest Vote Impossible

As the election now stands, Mr. Thieu has eliminated even the possibility of a protest vote. He undoubtedly will regard the vote on Oct. 3 as a referendum. In a broadcast tonight, govern-ment agencies were ordered to proceed with "all necessary preparations" for election day. The announcement also cleared the way for Mr. Thicu's speech, probably tomorrow night, opening his campaign. IRiot police and students clashed in Salgon Wednesday during a funeral procession that turned into an anti-covernment and anti-American demonstration, the Associated Press reported. The funeral was for a Buddhist stu-dent who died while taking sum-mer military training. The students carried banners calling for an end to this training and terming Mr. Thieu a "henchman of the United States."] Ky Is Pleased Told tooight at his home at Tan Son Mhut; sirport that his hame was off the ballot, Mr. Kr. said he was surprised but added "I'm glad."

An nide said that his staff would meet tomorrow morning to discuss the development.

Vice-President Ky had wanted to get off the ballot ever since announced on Aug. 23 that he would not campaign because of what he charged were Mr. Thieu's election-rigging tactics. Similar charges were made by Gen. Duong Van Minh, who withdrew on Aug. 20. Unlike Gen. Minh, Mr. Ky was unable to beat the legal deadline for withdrawal, meaning his name would have been put before the people. The Supreme Court first ruled Mr. Ky ineligible to run, then reversed itself after Gen. Minb quit and rushed the "final posting" so the vice-president could not legally withdraw.

Since then, Mr. Ky has called the court's attention to his decision against participating in what he called a fixed election, and he has refused to send representatives to help organize the election or to provide bis picture and the election symbol needed to print the ballots.

Assumption in Error The assumption in Saigon had been that President Thieu would proceed with the election on grounds that there would be two candidates, officially, if not poli-Just what prompted today's decision remains unclear. Hut last Monday, it was learned, Mr. Thieu sent a letter to the court asking whether it felt one or two candidates were in the race. All nine justices met yesterday to prepare a reply. This morning, in a letter signed by Tran Van Linh, the president of the court and a Thieu supporter, the court noted that its final posting of candidates listed two slates, one (Continued on Page 2, Col. 6)

Buckinghamshire, about 40 miles from London.

Harsh Relations

Since the Northern Ireland government imposed internment without trial last month-and a wave of violence engulfed the province—relations between Brit-ain and the Irish Republic have turned harsh.

Yesterday, Mr. Lynch charged that the British Army had lost control of its troops and claimed that soldiers had made at least 30 "incursions" into the Irish Republic over the past two years. Britain and Northern Ireland have made clear that internment to root out terrorists is the most essential policy at the moment to restore order in Ulster's six counties. Mr. Lynch feels that only a political solution will calm Northern Ireland and has urged an overhaul of the Protestantdominated government to give Roman Catholics equal representation. In recent weeks, Mr. Lynch has publicly condemned Britain for in 1961, ofter 44 months of seeking to find "military solutions" to the Ulster problem. In turn, Mr. Heath charged Mr. Lynch with attempting "to in-teriere in the affairs of the U.K." What especially angered Mr. Heath was Mr. Lynch's support for a passive resistance camnaten amone Ulster's Roman Catholics. Mr. Heath said that Mr. Lynch's support of passive resistance was "calculated to do the maximum damage to the cooperation between the communities in Northern Treland." Exchange of Views British officials said today that Mr. Heath had called the meeting because "a situation had developed between the two governments in which it was important that there should be an exchange of views soon." Officials emphasized that "the constitution of Ulster would not be an issue in the discussion."

The comment indicates that Mr. Hesth is not prepared to discuss ths drastic political changes that the Irish government urges. Instead, officials explained, the BONN, Sept. I (Reuters).—A final decision as to when the Ber-lin agreement will be signed was deferred today while the United States, Britain, France and Rus-sia threshed out an authorized German text, diplomatic sources said.

The signing is anticipated for noon GMT tomorrow, but West German and Allied sources have withheld all official announce-

Government spokesman Ruediger von Wechmar told a press conference today. "The signing is fixed on Day X at Y o'clock."

Although the ambassadors of the four powers last week agreed on texts in English, French and Russian, they have not yet cam-pleted an official German text.

To Prevent Squabble

This text has to be acceptable to both East and West Germany, as the Allies want to prevent a squabble over mterpretation between the two German states in the future, the sources said.

Mr. Wechmar said that if an authorized German version were not available by the signing tomorrow, the Bonn government would probably issue the official English text, which all parties agree is the master case of disputes.

He said the West German government was not sure whether it would issue an unauthorized German text. A work group appoint-ed by the four ambassadors was still engaged on the German translation of the agreement, he added.

The treaty, aimed st removing tensions in one of the world's most sensitive East-West trouble spots is the result of more than 17 months of hard negotiating among the four powers.

The moment it is signed there will be a special sitting of the Bonn cabinet to decide on guidelines for the next phase of the Berlin agreement, which will be negotiated by East and West Germany and the West Berlin

At the same time, he alluded to the danger that the United States, in its present difficulties, might be tempted to withdraw too much from the world. He said it was one thing for the people of America to want to withdraw from the Vietnam war—'I think it must be shared by the entire nation," he said—but to withdraw the United States completely from the world scene was quite another thing and would not be good in the present international The premier was relaxed and

He sported a blue, yellow and white-patterned tie, and joked about recently having made his first hole in one on what he described as a less-than-perfect golf shot, and he seemed determined to avoid any recriminations with the United States over past or present differences. When asked whether there had been a hreakdown in communications over Japanese textile exports to the United States and even a sultation, he merely turned the question to the future meeting in Washington hetween cabinet members of the two governments.

Army Physicals Continue in U.S. Despite No Draft

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1 (UPI).

-Men selected last month for possible induction into the armed forces next year had to begin reporting today for their physical examinations even though no authority now exists to draft A Selective Service spokesman said these men, whose lottery numbers were drawn Aug. 5 for next year's draft calls, were being ordered to take their physicals in anticipation of the resumption Since June 30, when the old draft law expired, only those whose lottery numbers were drawn last year and those just emerging from student deferments were called for physicals, awaiting congressional passage of a two-year extension of the draft But the spokesman said the law authorized the ordering of physicals today for men who may be drafted during the coming year. Both houses of Congress agreed extend the draft law for two years, but the measure has been stalled by disagreement over an anti-war a mendment. The draft's opponents said they would begin o filibuster when Congress returns next week.

Gen. Minh said all he asked was that the United States prevent the machinery that it

Alleged Defector Accuses Libyans In Chad Uprising FORT LAMY, Chad, Sept. 1 (AP).—A defector from the pro-Arab rebel movement in Chad charged today that the Libyan regime of Col. Mosmer Qadhafi provides guerrilla training, arms and passports to the rebels, The rebel, identified as Nassour Abakar, 20, testified in a radio broadcast here that he received three months of guerrilla training at a camp five miles south of Tripoli, the Libyan capital, Mr. Abakar said he was later taken to a rebelcontrolled area in northern Ohad and ordered into action. The Chad government of President François Tombalbaye has been fighting Moslem guerrillas in the Sahara for alx years. Since 1969, some 2,000 Prench soldiers have helped the Chad army fight the guerrillas in what French opposition politicians have called France's "little Vietnam." President Tombalbaye accused Libya of inspiring the attempted coup against his government on Aug. 28 and promptly broke diplomatic relations.

cd States has "made it clear that we consider Soviet arms shipments and Soviet operationat military involvement a matter of real concern." He added: "This involvement could have the most serious consequences and we continue to watch the situation closely." Mr. McCioskev's comments followed a report from Cairo that the Soviet Union was sending additional squadrons of jet fighters along with Soviet pilots to man them. U.S. officials said they have been aware of Soviet operations in Egypt since the spring of 1970 and that according to current estimates that involvement had not changed significantly. They said that Soviet deliveries to Egypt and Soviet participation in military operations there were taken into account in assessing the arms balance which the United States is pledged to maintain. A factor constantly cited in the arms balance is the superiority of Israeli over Egyptian pilots. Lorge numbers of Soviet pilots would appear to change the situation. 经验验

He said yesterday that the Supreme Court, in the unanimous decision he wrote, expressly did not require "a fixed racial balance"-the same racial percentages in each school as in the school system as a whole, Such a balance usually requires much busing.

Some federal judges in the South have been requiring racial balance, and some, justice Burger said, apparently think they

He called that "disturbing" in a ten-page opinion in which he refused-chiefly for technical reasons-to stay a racial-balance plan imposed by a U.S. district judge in July on the Winston-Salem, N.C. school system.

Nixon Position Similar The opinion was similar in many respects to the statement President Nixon issued four weeks ago in the Austin, Texas, school desegregation case. The President there disavowed a desegregation plan prepared by Department of Health, Education and Welfare that involved approximate racial balance and extensive busing. He said he would seek to hold busing to the would seek to hold busing to "the minimum required by law."

The President's statement was not binding on the courts. The Chief Justice's opinioo is not binding, either—the full Supreme Court is in recess-yet it could have a powerful effect on the major nusettled busing cases pending in federal courts across the South.

About half of the 40 largest school systems in the South have been issued busing orders by federal judges in the four months since the Supreme Court ruled. The rest have not, and will not bus this fall. Most of these remaining cases are headed toward the Fifth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans

Most in Black Schools These 40 districts were the ones most affected by the Supreme Court's decree in April. They contain almost a third of all the South's black schoolchildren, and last year most of those children still went to distinctly black schools in black neighborhoods.

In April, the court said to bus them. The issue since has been how many of them, and how

Winston-Salem system The with 49,000 students, is the second-largest in North Carolina. About 28 percent of the students are black; last year, more than half of the blacks went to schools more than 80 percent black by enrollment. Under the new order, all blacks will go to mostly white schools. The system which includes surrounding Forsyth County, was already busing 18,000 students last year, mostly in outlying areas. It will now have to bus about 16,000 more, a total of 34,000, about two-thirds of all enrolled. That will take 157 extra: buses

A Lack of Alternatives Justice Burger noted that both the district judge and the Winston-Salem school board apparently thought they had no alternatives short of racial balance under the Supreme Court's April ruling.

Yet that ruling, he went on, said quite carefully and plainly that "the constitutional command to desegregate schools does not mean that every school in every community must always reflect the racial composition of the school system as a whole."

What the court did say in April was that district judges should use exact racial balance as "a starting point" in drawing up or choosing between rival desegregation plans. Beyood that it gave them only several general and somewhat con-tradictory guldelines to follow.

Richardson Backs Nixon

SAN CLEMENTE, Sept. -Elliot Richardson, the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, asserted yesterday that he totally agreed with President Nixon's school busing policy and denied that he had considered resigning after Mr. Nixon poblicly repudiated a desegregation plan drawn up by Mr. Richardson's agency.

It was the secretary's first extensive public comment on the busing issue since Aog. 3, when Mr. Nixon ordered the Justice Department to "disavow" a plan approved by Mr. Richardson, Attorney General John N. Mitchell and members of the White House staff for extensive crosstown busing in Austin.

A guard at the plant called firemen, who found Mr. Campos, of nearby La Habra, watching the car burn. Fire officials estimated the loss at $6,500.

I had saved up for five years to buy that car new and turned out to be a lemon," Mr. Campos was quoted as having said when firemen asked why he had burned the car. "I had towed it in for repairs 10,000 times and everybody just laughed at me-the dealers I took it to, the Ford people. I couldn't get any satisfaction," he told firemen.

He added that Lufthansi would change its mmd on its demand for a simplified fare structure only if the West German Transport Ministry rejected the airline's own fare proposals, submitted last month. The Bonn government has a controlling share of the airline's capital.

Price War Threat Under IATA rules, decisions on prices have to be unanimous, and Lufthansa's lone dissenting vote on Aug. 11 effectively vetoed the new lower fares, posing the threat of an airline price war on the North Atlantic route.

Among IATA's proposals, which would take effect in February, is one for a round-trip excursion fare of $230 off-season and $280 high-season from Frankfurt to New York.

But a Lufthansa spokesman said last week: "When the current agreement expires in February, 1972, we plan to offer fares $10 to $30 under these figures." Presidents of the 24 airlines that fly the North Atlantic are expected to meet in Geneva next week to discuss the crisis.

Paris Makes It Official: A-Tests Off

PARIS, Sept. 1 (Reuters) .-France formally announced today that it had called off further nuclear tests in the Pacific this year, saying no scientific purpose woold be served by continuing

The official explanation contrasted with widespread speculation that France curtailed the test program mainly to safeguard its economic and political position in Latin America.

Government spokesman Leo Hamon said President Georges Pompidou had written a letter on the controversial issue to President Juan Velsasco Alvarado of Peru, who earlier warned that his government would break off relations with France if the nuclear blasts continued.

Mr. Hamon, who announced cancellation after the weekly cab-inet meeting, would not divulge the contents of the letter, but he said the Pacific explosions were being halted "for lack of further objectives."

Test explosions to date this year —five blasts in all—had fully met the hopes of French scientists, But he gave no explicit reply when asked if France intended to resume the tests as planned at its Pacific test center on Mururoa Atoli next year.

Arrests Up In Portugal, Group Says

Political Prisoners Double in 7 Months

LISBON, Sept. 1 (NYT),-A prisoners' aid organization reported today that the number of political detainees in Portugal had more than doubled during the first seven months of this year, and charged that a "brutal wave" of arrests was taking place.

The National Commission for Aid to Political Prisoners said in a communiqué from its Lisbon headquarters that at the beginning of the year there were 79 political prisoners, including those serving sentences and those under preventive detention,

By Aug. 15 this figure had risen to 160, the commission said, with 70 persons serving sentences and 90 under preventive detention. The figure related only to European Portugal, and did not include political detentions in the African colonies.

Picture Changed

The commission, which consists of lawyers and other professional men and women, charged that "the brutal wave of arrests by PIDE-DGS [tha security police] in the last few months has greatly changed the picture of police repression in our country, not only in number but in the type of people they arrest.

"Indiscriminate jailing, torture and beating, the systematic refusal of legal aid as well as other illegalities to those detained—although this is a constant policy of the government—have recently reached such intensity and ferocity that it would seem to in-dicate they [the security police] are endorsed by the government."

The communiqué came in the form of "an appeal to the Por-tuguese" to contribute funds to the commission to meet the requirements of the "new situation." The organization gives legal aid to detainees and also beins their families financially,

Independent Qatar Ends U.K. Accords

DOHA, Qatar, Sept. 1 (Reuters).—The Persian Gulf state of Qatar today announced its independence and decided to end

The announcement in Doha said, "Quter will assume its international responsibilities by itself and will take over full powers, both internally and exter-

"It will immediately begin taking the necessary measures for ining the Arab League and the United Nations." The statement expressed Qatar's backing for a ninemember federation of the gulf emirates and said it believes such a grouping is the best means for achieving progress and success for all. "It is also the best means to strengthen the close, brotherly ties between them and the other oarts of the greater Arab booteland and the strongest guarantee of the stability which we asolre to in our area," it said. Qatar is one of the nine small

Persian Gulf states that have been represented by Britain in foreign affairs under treaties dating from the 19th century. Much of their internal administration also has been carried on by British officials.

The country occupies a peninsula jutting into the gulf, border-ed inland by the Saudi Arabian province of Hass. Its area is about 4,000 square miles and its population about 60,000.

Qatar is one of the principal oil-producing countries of the Persian Gulf. All the gulf states have had independence forced on them because Britain has decided it no ionger can afford to maintain its administration or military presence in the region, Britain has encouraged the nine states to form a federation.

Military responsibility for the gulf has been assumed by Iran with British approval and American armaments. Iranian primacy is disputed, however, by Iraq, backed by Russla.

Far from Athens, they will be under the eye of military governors loyal to Mr. Papadopoulos.

New Foundation But more than convenient niches for unwanted advisers, the regions appear to constitute the premier's hope for developing a new style and a new foundation for Greek politics.

Byron Stamatapoulos, the government's newest press spokes-man and reputedly a close adviser to the premier, said in an interview that before the coup the fundamental requirement for the career of a potential leader was that "he come to Athens and find a protector or patron in a min-rested in the Athens suburb of Goudi, near a training center for Greek military police. Their plan to free 32-year-old Panagoulis, the spokesman said, was known from correspondence intercepted between the Greek, Constantine Androutsopoulos, 28, a student and a friend of Panagoulis, and Panagoulis's brother, Stathis, who recently came to Athens from Rome with an Italian passport. The spokesman gave no further details on Mr. Skelton. He described him as about 28 years old and as an "anarchist who expressed himself strongly against U.S. policy."

Bribery Alleged

Lady Amalia Fleming was the second wife of the late Sir Alexander Fieming. She is the daughter of Dr. Harilaos Coutsouris of Athens. She married Sir Alexander in 1953. He died in 1955.

Lady Firming is a resident of Athens. Last spring she obtained a passport to leave for London after authorities rejected ber first application.

The spokesman said that although the plan had not been completed, the alleged crime is considered under Greek penal law as having been carried

He said the entire escape plan was engineered by Alexander Panagonlis, who had tried to bribe a guard by promising him a life of luxury abroad guard tipped off the military authorities, who were waiting for the group to approach the military prison early yesterday morning, officials claimed.

The government spokesman said that Panagoulis planned to give his guard sleeping pills in soft drinks. Once the guard fell asleep Panagoulis was then to make his way to the edge of the military camp under the cover of darkness and jump the fence, to be met by three of the group, he said. He stated that they then planned to proceed to a waiting car driven by Lady Fleming.

"The problem for the military police was not bow to prevent the escape . . . but how to arrest the others," he said. Mr. Stamatopoulos said that the authorities "used a trick and two other people who resembled Panagoulis and a warden out of the door. The two then jumped over the fence, and the persons waiting in the car tooted the car horn on schedule, and were then arrested."

Theft of Titian Is Only One Of Big Italian Art Burglaries

PIEVE DI CADORE, Italy, Sept. 1 (UPI1.-Thieves hid today with a Titian painting so priceless as to be virtually worthless on the open market.

The burglars took the painting, a Madonna and Child, 39 by 55 inches, from the parish church of this town near Venice where Titian was born in 1477. It was the only one of the master's works that the town possessed.

Prof. Francesco Valeanover, the superintendent of art and monuments for the Venice region, sald the value of the Titian was "inestimable." The police put forward the theory it had been stolen on commission by a collector wanting to keep it for himself because of the difficulty of placing it on the open market.

The thieves also stole 13 other paintings, which Prof. Valcanover said were worth in all $1.6 milllon. It was the biggest of three major art thefts in Italy this contractor Alteo Paolucci. It was part of a wave of art thefts of unprecedented propor-tions, with thieves looting poorlyguarded churches, such as the one at Pieve di Cadore.

Police said the thieves got away with something like $48 million worth of art treasures last year and said the total could be even higher this year.

The Titian work had sentimental interest for his birthplace hecause he painted himself in it, disguised as a shepberd. His daughter, Lavinia, was the model for the Madonna and his brother and a cousin for two saints.

Helping themselves to communion wine while they worked, the thieves stripped canvases from their frames, leaving behind those they could not detach. The police said they apparently hid behind the organ at closing time, when the church was left unattended for the night.

N.Y. Will Give Drunk Drivers A Screen Test

-Suspected drunken drivers, frequently asked to take a breath test, also will be subject to filming in a new program hy the New York City police. The program, the first of its kind in the country, will start Oct. 15.

A police movie crew will film a suspected drunken driver while his rights ere being explained to him, Then the driver will be asked to take trunkenness tests and to have these tests filmed. The suspect will have the right to refuse the tests, and the right to agree to take the tests and refuse to be filmed. The tests are the standard ones of walking a straight line touching one's nose and bending down to pick up colas. The audio system will pick up the suspect's grunts, groons and other noises.

The films will be presented as evidence in court to show the driver as he appeared at the time of his arrest instead of as the "cleaned-up fashion plate he resembles at the trial time," a police official said.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1 (WP). -South Korea will tell China that it plans no military alliance with Japan, informed sources say

The South Koreans have asked Canadian officials to inform Peking of this stand and to report back on any Chinese reaction, the sources said.

Informed sources said that the South Korean view was that China wanted the United States out of Vietnam and sought an end to U.S. support of Taiwan. At the same time, these sources said, the Chinese do not want a total U.S. withdrawal from Asia for fear that the vacuum might be filled by Japan.

The South Koreans also believe that North Kores would prefer to see American troops in the South rather than risk a Japanese military presence, sources said

On Aug. 20, Red Cross officials from North and South Korea met at Panmunjom, the neutral armistice camp, to talk about the problem of families divided by the Korean war, an estimated 10

The Sonth Koreans believe that the tracing of such families will be followed by an exchange of letters and possible cross-border visits. But no official contact between the two governments is foreseen in the near future.

Peking may have pressed North Korea to ease its attitude toward the South, and the North Koreans may well feel isolated as a result of President Nixon's decision to visit China.

The South Koreans have apparently made it clear that they expect the North Koreans to rednce border attacks and other acts of violence. In return for an end to the violence and recognition of the government in Seoul, the South Koreans would be more flexible toward North Korean membership in the United Nations.

South Korea detected an initial softening in the attitude of the North as early as last January. They now hope that Peking will encourage North Korea to continue to take a less belligerent attitude toward Scoul. In addition to the meeting between Red Cross officials from the two Koreas-the first direct contact hetween Seoul and Pyongyang sinc, the Korean war—the recent appearance_of a North Korean ship in a Japanese port for the first time further reflected the changing climate in Asia. The passenger vessel Manyang Bang left Nigata, Japan, on Aug. 20 with some repatriates who bad chosen to live in North rather than South Kores. The proceedings took place with the tacit approval of the Japanese government-a modest step tord relaxing

'Democracy' in Saigon

For what little it may matter, President Thieu has lost some seats but apparently retains a comfortable majority as a result of the lower-house elections in South Vietnam. One must say "for what little it may matter," because the lower house has held no substantial power, and nobody with a political IQ over 27 could imagine that President Thieu would indulge its taste for power if it somehow developed one. The opposition's gains suggest that Mr. Thieu's support in the country is declining, but his majority and the way he got it suggest that he does not intend to let himself be limited by any factor so peripheral to his real authority as the degree of his popular support.

The eimple truth is that he owes his authority to an American decision to build np in Saigon a government—his—strong enough to conduct the war at a certain level on its own. This decision, implemented in the "Vietnamization" program, made it practically certain that the United States would allow no meaningful political challenge to Mr. Thieu. And it has not.

Reports from the scene say that President Thieu engaged in heavy-handed rigging to insure that the opposition in tha new legislatura would not reach dimensions which could ruffle his personal rule. About the candidacy of Ngo Cong Duc, a deputy defeated for reelection, Washington Post correspondent Peter Osnos wrote Tuesday: *From observers who spent election day there, both journalists and American diplomats, comes the word that a systematic fix was on notable for its flagrancy." From San Clemente, however, Mr. Nixon issued the announcement that the elections went off "smoothly, with a large turnout despite enemy efforts to disrupt the proceedings." That the elections went off "smoothly" was, in our view, nothing to boast of. President Thieu's actions indicated that he was concerned less about "enemy disruption" than about political challenge. He put down his challengers, or most of them, and got a clean bill of health from the White House for his (which is to say, their) pains.

The main show remains the presidential "election" scheduled for Oct. 3. By tipping his opposition out of the race, Mr. Thieu has turned it from an election into a plebiscite, and all the best efforts of Ambassador Bunker to get him to restore the facade of a contest have so far been unavailing. There is no doubt that Mr. Bunker's success in this venture would make it a good deal easier for the President to explain to the American people that their sons have not been lost, and their treasure spent, in vain, and that they ought to allow Mr. Nixon to expend whatever more resources he deems fit on America's way out of the war. But there is little doubt either that Mr. Bunker'e failure to arrange a show contest in Saigon will tighten congressional and popular pressures on Mr. Nixon to withdraw faster and more completely than he may have planned.

The embarrassment of supporting a Caesar in Saigon is preferable, in our judgment, to any further effort to construct a legitimate or even a show democracy there. Such an effort would be prolonged and a president so minded might be tempted to use it as an excuse for a greater involvement. The time is past for the United States to try to arrange the politics of South Vietnam for its own convenience. It is disheartening, not to say tragic, that a decade's endeavor to assure "self-determination" to Saigon should end in this way, but it will be acceptable if it is indeed the end.

THE WASHINGTON POST.

The Mikheyev Case

Thousands of Soviet citizens, from diplomats and scientists to ordinary seamen, have defected in the last half-entury. Normally the Soviet press ignores these flights. except when a person of unusual prominence such as Stalin's daughter is involved.

Now, however, two leading Moscow, publications are playing up the case of a hitherto unknown young Soviet physicist named Dmitri Mikheyev, who was arrested at the airport as he was about to depart using a visiting Swiss citizen's passport as a cover document

The publicity being given the unfortunate Mr. Mikheyev, who has been sentenced to eight years in a labor camp, undoubtedly has several goals. It is aimed at strengthening the image of the KGB as an infallible watchdog guarding against internal subversion. At the same time Soviet students and scientists are put on notice that the secret police are aware of how, some persons in both groups are falling victim to the wiles of foreign visitors. No doubt the hope is that Soviet citizens reading about the Mikheyev case will get the point that it is wisest to keep away from foreigners—as it was in the Stalin

Outsiders will wonder how strong the Soviet edifice is if measures of the kind employed against Mr. Mikheyev have to be used. Why is the Kremlin afraid to let its disaffected young go abroad to compare the society they know with alternative life styles? Europe has been flooded this summer with disaffected young Americans who can leave and enter the United States freely. It would be a sign of genuine Soviet security if Russians, young and old, were given similar opportunities to see other climes and other societies as an aid in making their own judg-

International Opinion

The Japanese Yen

The announcement from Tokyo that the Japanese yen is to float for the time being is much the most welcome news since President Nixon took the dollar formally off gold almost two weeks ago. Equally, it is as yet an unhatched egg and should not be counted for a chicken. There is still a long way to go, even though the crisis does now appear to be travelling along the right road. . .

The yen is so elaborately hedged about by exchange controls and other manifestations of Japan's corporatist society that it lies well within the powers of the authorities in Tokyo to prevent the yen from floating up very much. It remains to be seen what will be allowed to happen. . .

-From the Times (London).

In the chort term it may be said that this move introduces a new element of uncertainty into the situation and it may be that the markets will reflect this during the next week. But it is probably the case that the extreme calm and lack of movement which has characterized the scene during the earlier part of last week has been an artificial one. . .

The main thing is that moves can now be made toward a political settlement of the whole monetary question. It may be necessary to allow currencies to float for some tima before talking about a new international monetary structure. But some new equilibrium will clearly have to be reached if the foreign exchange market is to work well and the threat of growing protectionism is to be held at hay. The period of argument and uncertainty may be prolonged by the American refusal to even discuss the possibility of a small increase in the dollar price of gold, but this must not be allowed to prevent some broad understanding on commercial policy between the United States and its allies and the institution of a new framework of international monetary cooperation which can be both permanent and flexible. Such an agreement will not be reached easily even now, but it is certain that without the move by the Japanese authorities it could not have been reached at all.

-From the Financial Times (London).

The French Atomic Tests

Reports that France will abandon the remainder of the planned atomic test series in the Pacific will be welcomed by the hundreds of millions of people who live in the countries surrounding the Pacific Ocean. There has been rare international unanimity in condemning the nuclear tests conducted by France near Tahiti. If the French government has decided, as reported, to cancel the rest of the tests, it will be a victory for common sense and international public

The French authorities have made repeated claims that the atomic explosions are "clean" and cannot cause damage to health. These claims would be more readily believed if the tests were carried out in France, rather than in the middle of the South Pacific. -From the Hong Kong Standard.

Death at the Border

Mr. Lynch [Eire's prime minister] has succeeded in making a lengthy statement about Sunday's appalling border incident without uttering a single word of regret about the death of the British soldier to which it led. Morally, his position ie that of a man whn allows a member of his household to shoot someone who walks inadvertently into his garden, and then proceede to be outraged at the trespasser's behavior.

TOKYO,-The top political and business characters in Tokyo are playing down the American-Japanese financial crisis. Their nightmare seems to be that tha dollar-yen problem, with elections coming up in both Japan and the United States next year, will create political and psychological problems of the most serious Accordingly, if you go into the antiseptic board room of the Fuji Bank, the largest commercial bank in Japan, or Premier Sato's quiet office, the atmosphere is elaborately calm.

Everything will work out all right, the bankers and the premier seem to be saying, if only everybody, and especially the press, will be sensible and patient. The objective facts about international trade, balance of payments, inflation, gold, unemployment and all the rest are bad enough, they problem is the subjectiva psychological and political danger that politicians will find foreign scapegoats for their domestic disappointments.

In other words, if a visitor hears these serious and troubled men in Tokyo clearly, what has really been devalued is not mainly the American dollar but, as the Japanese see it. America's ability to handle its own internal problems and foreign commitments. The problem is not that the Japanese yen is "floating" but that both the Nixon and the Sato governments are "floating" with-out any clear policy nn either side about where they are going.

A Basic Difference

There is obviously a fundamental difference here between the private and the public analyses of the United States-Japanese financial crisis. Premier Satn is very calm about it all. He recognizes the problems for Japan of President Nixon's "new economic policy," and particularly the problem for Japan's exporters, but thinks Japan can import more from the United States and in other ways handle the problem without unacceptable risks to either country.

Beyond that, he eeems quite confident that Japan can spend more on public works to avoid an economic depression in this country, and be insists that, despite the political difficulties created by President Nixon'e sudden economie and diplomatic innovations, the United States is still the core of Japan's economic and security policy.

At least, for public consumption, whatever his private reservations. he is making no breaks with Washington. He has accepted President Nixon's dramalic dipascy toward reconciliation with the Chineso government in Pe-king, and he expresses a profeseional politician's admiration for Nixon's hold moves, particularly his wage and price freeze, to protect the dollar. He talks hopefully ebout a Nixon visit to Japan and, at some future date, a formal visit by the Japanese emperor, not only to Alaska, but also to

Under Steady Fire

The private talk here is different and in some ways, even ominous. Premier Sato, facing an election next year, was in trouble with his pro-Washington policy even before Nixon decided to go to Feking and announced his economic policies that seemed to be directed against the Tokyo out consultation with Tokyo in advance?

Every move Nixon Why, Premier Sato's opponents ask, should he rely on an Amerimakes that touches Japanese interests, without consultation with can President who decides to go the government here, becomes an Peking without telling Sato issue against Sato.

Nevertheless, Sato counts on who suddenly introduces a new the conviction among the Japanese people that Japan's economic and military security depends, and will continue to depend in the foreseeable future, on the American alliance, and most observers here seem to think that, despite doubts among the rising generation, he is right.

In any event, Sato is riding out the rising political storm, and minimizing the effects of Nixon's economic and diplomatic American alliance is Japan's best hope for the foreseeable future.

The message that is heard from

The Delta War

By Rowland Evans and Robert Novak

BINH MINH DISTRICT, VINH LONG PROVINCE, South Victuam. - Late one night last week, Communist guerrilles overran an outpost in this Mekong River Delta district, killing the sleeping South Vietnamese soldiers and departing with many U.S. weapons—an incident of tha kind whose recent frequency has generated serious misconce about the present stale of the Vietnam war.

Contrary to widespread U.S. press reports, overrunning such outposts does not connote a general breakdown of security in the delta. Rather, Viet Cong activity is at its lowest level since 1961 in this most populous and most fertile region of South Vietnam. Whereas Communists dominated the delta countryside in 1968, only 2 percent of its 6 million population are now under Viet Cong

What overrunning outposts does mean is that the delta guer-rilla war is by no means finished. Indeed, the Communists are entering a new stage which, while it constitutes no threat to Salgon's control of the delta, will be bloody and prolonged.

This, in brief, is the present situation in the delta, "rice bowl" of Indochina and the key Com-munist target for two decades:

Enemy on Run

There has been no regression in government control. Some 35,000 Communist troops, outnumbered nearly 10 to 1, are on the run. A South Victnamese Army offensive is pounding three North Victnamese regular regi-ments in the U Minh Forest at the southern tip of the delta, no longer the impregnable Commu-nist sanctuary it had been since

Bu: amid this is one contra-dictory statistic: Out of tha delta'e 4,000 government outposts manned by territorial troops regional forces (RF) and popular forces (PF)-82 have been overrun this year (16 in Vinh Long Province alone). To explore the reasons, consider the details of wha, happened in Binh Minh District last week.

Most of the outpost's fulltime PP piatoon was away, guarding a dam construction site. As replacements, members of the People'e Self-Defense Force (PSDF) -a part-time militia carrying pick - me - up weapons - manned the outpost. The militiamen promptly fell asleep. Communist guerrilles attacked with rockets, killed the defenders and destroyed the outpost. The toll: 13 dead and 29 weapons (including soma M-16 automatic rifles) captured.

This and similar small disasters are directly attributable to deplorable South Vietnamese tactics. Despite their huge numerical advantage, too few PF and RF troops are spread too thin over too many outposts. Rather than leave the outpost guarded mainly by untrained militiamen, the Binh Minh District chief could have abandoned it temporarily, observers pointed out,

Unused to Action

Such poor management stems partly from complacency. Vinh Long Province, once a Communist bastion, is now so completely pacified that some leaders-including the Binh Minh District chief-have grown unaccustomed to action.

Complacency was biatant in another Binh Minh outpost we visited three days later. There had been no Viet Cong attack in that area since the 1968 Tet offensive, and the outpost's PF platoon had not contacted the enemy for two months. The 43-year-old platoon leader, barefoot and carrying no sidearm, informed us there is "no possibility" . an attack on his outpost. Yet American advisers regard it as likely to be overrun next.

It is no coincidence that the Viet Cong overran the first-mentloned Binh Minh outpost the very night that its PF platoon was dispersed. The answer is that Communist agents—called "legal cadres"—are now infiltrating the South Victnamese apparatus, including PF platoons manning the outposts, in a new phase of the war. At some overrun outposts, the attack began with sabotage by a Viet Cong agent posing as a PF rifleman

This new stage is getting bloody: 533 South Vietnamese combat deaths in Vinh Long Province this year compared with 538 in all of 1970. But these are the tactics of despair. An overrun outpost is rebuilt and reoccupied within 48 hours. In Vinh Long, not a single hamlet is under Communist control and all guerrillas may be cleared out within a year.

That is not true of more troublesome delta provinces, such as adjoining Kien Hoa, where guerrillas will persist for many years. But for all the publicity about overrun outposts, the truth is that this is the last Communist, gasp in the delta. The real military threat, by regulars and guerrillas, is in the country's northernmost provinces, where Hanol might capitalize on the Saigon political crisis to strike now.

Italy's Dean Of Composers

By William Weaver

SIENA, Italy (IHT).—Now well into his 80s, Gian Francesco Malipiero is the dean of living Italian composers and remains one of the protagonists of Italian musical life, as he has been for over half a century. Age has not diminished his wit (as recent publications demonstrate), non has it slowed down his productivity. Every season there are two or three Maliplero premieres. At this year's Siena Festival alone, two new works were presented for the first time a few nights ago. .

The occasion was a program of three Malipiero one-act operas, admirably suited to the intimat proportions of the Teatro del Rinnuovati. One of the operas is about 15 years old; "Il Figliuolo Prodigo" (The Prodigal Son), in fact, shows its age and—apart from a couple of charming songs -seems a routine piece. The opera that opened the evening, called "L'Iscariota," is virtually a monologue for the character of Judas. The text—like those of the other operas-is by Malipiero himself, and is an interesting prose poem, though it is anti-dramatic and only occasionally struck musical sparks from the

The third opera, however, was on another level. It is entitled "Uno del Dieci" (One of the Ten1, and is set in Malipiero's native Venice, shortly after the fall of the republic. The aged protago-nist, member of the Council of Ten has withdrawn to his room, to the past, Ha refuses to accept history, and his sons and friends conspire to continue the deception, wearing antiquated clothes, suppressing news, and so on, until finally the old man throws away his mask, faces reality, and—with it—the prospect of his own death. The autobio-graphical element is strong and evident, and it obviously generated a deeply felt piece, enthusias-tically received by the Siena

In the palazzo's music room, violinist Franco Guili, and pianist Enrica Cavallo splendidly performed Busoni's two violin sonates. The two-piano team Gorini-Lorenzi followed with stirring interpreta-tions of Buson's "Improvisation on a Bach Chorale" and the complex, impressive "Fantasia Con-

Swedish Sour Herring: Love It or Leave It

Jan Sjöby, a Swede, has by his own admission eaten surströmming twice, once in 1941 and again in 1959.

By Jan Sjöby ULVON, Sweden (IRT).-You love it or you loatha it.

There is no in-between.

Surströmming - sour herring, literally—is the gastronomic spe-cialty of this island, some 20 miles south of the city of Ornskoldsvik on the Swedish Bothnian Sea coast. It is made from saited Baltic herring, a dwarfed subspecies of Clupea harengus, which has been allowed to ferment in barrels under the mild sub-boreal summer sun. The fermented fish (rotten fish, as the loathers would put it) emits a very pungent odor addicts). About a million Swedes, most of them living in or halling from the "North Country" north of the Dal River, love it. Some seven million Swedes with their origins south of the river wouldn't touch the stuff with a bargepole. Feelings run high in the oblong kingdom in the month of September, the traditional surströmming month.

Sour herring, according to tradition, originated in the mid-1500s when King Gustav Vasa slapped a heavy tax on the salt trade. Fishermen along the coasts were forced to cut down on salt when preserving their catches for the winter. On Ul-von, the fish started to ferment and smell, but one brave (or very hungry?) fisherman decided to taste it anyway. He found it not only good but delicious. A unique tradition in fish processing was

"Everything has to be just right," explains Fridolf Nord-qvist, uncrowned "King of Ulvon" and nationally recognized specialist on the production and consumption of sour herring. They've tried to imitate our processes down south and up north. But it wouldn't work. Down south the summer days were too short, up north too long. Around here, on the 63d parallel, they are just right."

The herring are caught in May and they must be absolutely fresh out of the sea when slipped into a brine with a salinity of 24 percent. The fish absorb some 10 to 12 percent of the salt in the first 40 hours and they are left until the salinity in the brine is down to 10 percent, around mid-July. By then they are testsmelled and tasted and, if found good, sealed in circular tin cans.

be sold over counter until the interested in everything outland-third Friday of August. The isb, ordered a constant of fermentation pressers. fermentation processes continue inside the cans and by September-the traditional month for mad surströmming parties—a can may have taken on the shape of a balloon.

The cans are opened with care bordering on reverence. An evil smell fills the kitchen, penetrates into the rest of the apartment and into neighboring apartments.

'You can eliminate 90 percent of the smell by rinsing the herring in carbonated water," explains Mr. Nordqvist. "But no real aficionado would stoop that low. The olfactory sensations are just as exciting as the gustatory, once you get used to them." No Aquavit

Contrary to popular belief, a real sour herring eater doesn't drown his fish and his good senses in oceans of aquavit. "You may have a tiny one be-fore the feast," says Mr. Nord-

"But once the can is open you stick to milk or weak beer. Your tastebuds must no be dulled by alcohol when consuming a delicacy like surstromming." Recommended with the fermented fish are North Country specialties like newly harvested "almond potatoes"—a type of potato that thrives in the sandy soil of the region—and mountains of tunnbrod, paper-thin sheets of barley bread, vaguely resembling a Mexican tortilla in shape and taste. A variety is the stut: the etymology is uncertain but the word is normaly used in Swedish to denote a breeding bull A stut consists of buttered tunnbrod loaded heavily with potato slices, chopped chives, brine from the can and a filet or two or herring, all topped by a slice of tomato. An alternative is the "small sandwich"; a tunnbröd double-decker with mashed potstoes and a berring filet or two.

There is hardly any export of surströmming-a little goes to Norway and a little to Finland. The total figures don't amount to more than 1,000 cans.

Britain Begins 'Moderate' Recovery, Institute Says

LONDON, Sept. 1 (AP).—Britain's economy appears to have begun a "moderate recovery" from a recession which has created the country's highest level of unemployment since World War II. the influential National Institute Economic Review said today. But the independent institute's latest quarterly report held little hope of a significant drop in the number of jobless workers before the end of 1972. The institute attributed the uptrend in the economy to the Conservative government's reflationary measures—including tax cuts and easier credit-announced in April and July. But it said: "There seems little likelihood of any significant reversal of this year's rise in unemployment before the end of The present degree of stack in the economy, which is greater than in any previous post-war recession, seems likely to continue for some time."

The number of unemployed in Britain jumped last month by 75,000 to 904,190, equivalent to 3.7 percent of the working population. The reviaw said unemployment would probably still be running at around 850,000 to 900,000 early next year. It forecast that the bulk of new investment in response to the reflationary measures will be delayed until 1973, and predicted a 1 percent rise in total investment this year followed by a 2 percent increase in 1972. The review said it expected Britain would record a balancenf-payments surplus this year of £675 million, or $1.52 billion at the official parity.

Yen Holds at 6% Premium; Official Support Reported

TOKYO, Sept. 1 (Reuters),-

The Japanese yen continued to-day to float about 6 percent above its old fixed parity amid growing evidence that the gov-ernment intends to keep it there until international negotiations lix new currency parlties. The yen was quoted at 338.80 to 338.50, almost nuchanged from vesterday, compared with its old fixed rate of 360 to the dollarabandoned by the government on Saturday. Banking sources sald liney believed the Bank of Japan.was intervening in the market to bold the rise in value to about 6 percent until multilateral talks on parity adjustments later this month.

They said they thought Japan would seek a yen revaluation of less than 10 percent.

The sources said that after tightening exchange controls last night the central bank bad privately asked leading exchange banks not to make heavy dollar sales that would again disrupt . the market.

Some exchange banks were reported to be lending their surpius dollars to the Eurodollar market at high interest rates rather than selling them on the local market at a ioss.

Tadashi Sasaki, governor of up fractionally from the Bank of Japan, told a press conference the bank would not reveal when it was intervening in the exchange market.

He said the yen would eventually find its own level, but he did not think complete normality in the foreign trade transactions could be expected while it was floating.

The governor also said he expected a proposal for the United States to change the dollar price of gold would be made at the multilateral talks.

These, and other comment, indicate that Japan may abandon its traditional support for U.S. views on international monctary matters and align itself with leading European countries in-

Mr. Sasaki said that the current international monetary crisis was brought about largely by the dollar's weakness and therefore an argument is likely to arise that the price of gold should be mised. Yesterday, Finance Ministry officials said a resolution of the crisis should not come from actions by surplus countries alone. This statement was in answer to a question about whether Japan favors a gold price increase.

Bernstein Says Other

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1 (Reuters).-A top American economist proposed today that the United States formally devalue the dollar by 7 to 8 percent rather than let it float downwards.

Edward Bernstein, who helped set up the current international monetary system in 1944, niade his proposals to a congressional committee as ten major industrial nations prepared to meet in Paris this weekend on President Nixon's decision to unhinge the dollar from its gold backing. Mr. Bernstein said the United States should formally devalue by 7 to 8 percent while about six major trading partners boosted the value of their currencies by n similar amount. The net result would be a 15 compared with strong currencies such as the Japanese yen and the German mark. He also said he opposed the 10 percent import surcharge unposed as part of the administration's new economic policies.

Mr. Bernstelo, who now heads his own economic research firm. sald that if the United States told the major trading nations it would depreciate the dollar by 7 to 8 percent, they might agree to revalue their currencies by a similar amount. He said the United States should then agree to remove the 10 percent import surcharge in exchange for an agreement. He suggested that five or six nations were most likely to be in a position to revalue their currency upward, and named Japan, Germany, Switzerland, the Nethcrlands and Belgium.

FMC Corp. Plans to Make Synthetic Oil, Gas From Coal and Kennecott Corp.'s Peabody Coal division have announced agreement to develop such a gas synthesis plant. And Continental Oil Co., the Institute of Gas Technology FMC, and Combustion Engineering are working with the U.S. Office of Coal Research on pilot plants to produce synthetic luels from coal. Mr. Tower said FMC's proposed plant would produce 250 milllon cubic feet of synthetic pipeline gas daily, which would be sold to pipelines or utilities for 75 to 90 cents per 1,000 cubie feet, depending on location of the plant, cost of coal and financing costs. Mr. Tower sald the S4-a-barrel price, while well above that for conventional crude oil wouldn't justify production of synthetic crude alone from coal. But i:c said the contribution of this byproduct income to the overall operation improves the economics of the venture.

Refiners are willing to pay a higher than market price for the synthetic crude because it will be a partially processed product high in aromatics content, and low in metals and sulpbur impuritles. Mr. Tower said. He said it would be of particular value to increase the "octane" rating of gasoline without use of lead additives. The production of the FMC plant would be equal to about one-fourth of the input of an averaged-sized 100,000 barrel-a-day

The price for the synthetic gas from FMC's plant would be at least 15 cents per 1.000 cubic feet iower than that produced by any other available process for making synthetic gas from coai, Mr. Tower said. He asserted that it is "at least 15 cents cheaper" than the Lurgi process. He said the price advantage comes chiefly from the by-product symhetic crude oll and from use in the process of air in place of costly oxygen, he added.

Mr. Tower estimated that it would cost oil and gas companies about $450 million to find and develop new fields to provide the equivalent of the 2,000,000 million cubic feet of gaz and 200 million barrels of oil that would be produced in 25 years from the proposed FMC plant. FMC is talking with oil com-

Rolls Chief Says Firm Has 'Turned Corner'

LONDON, Sept. 1 (UPI).-Rolls-Royce has "turned the corner" over the RB-211 engine. Lord Cole, chairman of Rolls-Royce Ltd. (1971), claimed to-

In a message to workers he said that tests on the engine whose skyrocketing costs pushed the firm into bankruptcy had just been completed and were encouraging to us all."

The Japanese ven took the Soviet Union today devalued the largest jump-5.16 percent—while the smallest change was in the Canadian dollar, which changed only .32 percent.

Dollar Change Expected The adjustment of the rubic in terms of the U.S. dollar is expected to follow shortly. So far the Soviet Union is maintaining the fiction that the dollar is worth 90 kopecks.

Since the Soviets in their foreign trade can convert their present dollar income into fewer German marks, French francs and other capitalist currencies than before, reducing the ex-change value of the dollar here will bring it abreast of Western monetary changes.

A reduction of the value of the dollar of between 2 and 8 percent is expected.

Dullar Level

Moscow has not done it yet presumably because the dollar is still fluctuating. The Soviet banks wili probably wait ontil the doilar levels out on the Western money exchanges.

The rates set by the bank are arbitrary and are much higher then the presumed worth of the ruble on open money markets. The real value of the rubic is not established, but black marketeers here often approach tourists with exchange offers of four to five rubles for one dollar.

By Alan Truscott

The North-South partnership was content to play three hearts on the border-line game values shown in the diagram. When South opened one heart and West overcalled one spade, North made a slightly eccentric jump to four hearts.

North knew on the precision system that his partner held at least five hearts and 11-15 points, so there were no slam prospects and the hand did not seem wellsuited to no-trump play in spite of the double spade guard.

It can be seen that three notrump by North would probably have failed after the lead of the spade nine. The declarer could develop four heart tricks, but would be likely to misguess in clubs in trying for the ninth trick. The four-heart contract proved to depend on the same guess.

South was able to work out that the original club distribution. was five on her right and two on her left. Mathematically, this made the odds five to two in favor of finessing. But there were two arguments pointing in the opposite direction.

A finesse could mean a two trick defeat instead of a one trick defeat, but this was a trivial consideration. Far more important was a psychological point.

East had returned the club ten. at the fourth trick with considerable assurance. Holding the club queen, he would not have been so sure that a club shift was wise. Guided by this clue, South finally put up the club king, dropped the queen and won.

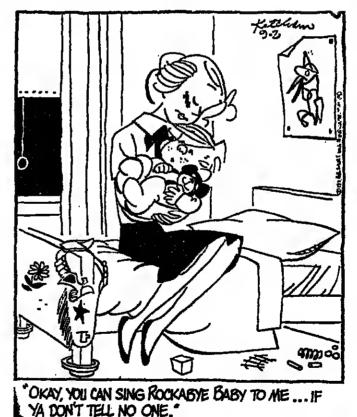

In the post-mortem, it was suggested that a spade lead would have been best for the defense, but East-West quite naturally began with two top diamonds and a diamond ruff. This did not greatly damage South, since it used up East's potential trump trick.

seconds; 85 die ever hour; 2,040 children die every day. Yet the United States spends less than 1 percent, the minimum requested by the United Nations, of its gross national product to diminish this rate of dying in aid to all of the Third World nations, including Brazil. At the same time, largely because of the miserable prices imposed on raw materials imported from countries like Brazil, the capital we gain from them is about twice the capital we invest. No wonder we still call Brazil a Good Neigh-

Money Léon Bloy said is the blood of the poor. And as Dom Helder Campra, the archbishop of Olinda and Recife in the desperately underdeveloped northeast of Brazil, says in one burning phrase among many in this book, "It isn't easy to be rich and go on being human." He is talking about nations, not just individuals, it is characteristic of him that he is equally concerned to see the humanization of the subhuman men made so by poverty and misery and that of the superhuman men distorted by money and luxury. He frequently cites in these pages Pope Paul's great and greatly ignored encyclical "Populorum Progressio," to the effect that there is no absolute right to private property and that no one has the right to reserve for his exclusive use more than he needs. while others lack the necessities of life. What is imperative, Dom Helder insists, is justice from the rich nations, not simply aid or charity.

Though his many high enemies in Latin America call him "Fidel Castro in a cassock" and "the Red bishop of Recife," Dom Helder is not a Marxist. He does believe that Marxism contains a humanism at its core and that a Christian can honor and work with that. He certainly con-demns "the bugaboo of Communism," in pursuit of which the United States has tried to justify its insane warfare state. And for this, as well as for denounc-ing neocolonialism and elavocracy within Latin America and publicly pointing to the murders and tortures perpetrated by the gen-erals' regimes in Brazil, he has been branded "subversive" by those caesaropapists and their minions. One of his assistant priests in the Movement for Action, Justice, and Peace which he founded was murdered, and an attempt was to have been made on Dom Hélder's own life, but the would-be assassin came to him and told him he could not do it because the bishop had done so much for the people. Dom Hélder was in fact nominated for the Nobel Peace Prize.

"Revolution Through Peace," exact description of Dom Hélder's vision, is the most substantial gathering in English of the speeches, sermons, lectures and colloquies of this galvanic little man. The themes range from "Evangelism and Human-

He then broke Newcombe's service in the sixth game and served out the match.

Newcombs, seemed to lose all poise in the second set as his vaunted big-game service deserted him.

Kodes, usually not a menacc on grass, slipped and skidded in the first set but then steadled down as Newcombe's service went awry and his volleys were consistently long.

In the two tie-breaking sets. Kodes was unstoppable. He dropped the first point in each exchange but came back to win both games by identical point

In their other meeting this year, Kodes beat Newcombe in the Italian Open en route to losing to Rod Laver in the final. Panchn Gonzales, the 43-yearold marvel waivered in the first set but then came on to defeat 16-year-old Bob Kreiss, 6-7, 6-4, Frank Froehling of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., took a straight set victory, 6-3, 6-3, 6-3, over Justin Fassbender of West Germany. Fassbender was a substitute for Jan Kukal of Czechoslovakia, who falled to appear.

Owen Davidson of Australia eliminated Bob Maud of South Africa, 6-3, 7-5 2-6, 6-9.

The defection of top professionals from the tournament is the result of the continuing dispute between World Championship Tennis and the various national associations. At least seven members of WCT including Ken Rosewall, the defending champion; Laver, another former winner; Cliff Drysdale. Andres Gimeno, Roy Emerson and Fred Stolle, have decided to skip a run at the $20,000 first prize, "Lamar Hunt assures me that he had nothing to do with these decisions." said Bill Talbert, tournament director. The struggle involves several issues, mainly scheduling of tournaments, distribution of purses and player commitments.

Drysdale's absence should please one group, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, which picketed today's opening in an effort to have all South African players barred from future U.S. sports

Angels' Johnson Testifies Before Arbitration Board

Alex Johnson testified for 3 1.2 houra yesterday before a threeman arbitration board in his bid to collect half his $42,500 salary from the California Angels.

The board took testimony from the 1970 American League batting champion who was suspended without pay June 26. The board neord testimony from the club last Saturday in Anaheim, Calif. Dr. Lawrence Jackson, the psychiatrist who has been treating Johnson in Detroit, his home town, also appeared.

Emotional Reasons'

Johnson and his attorney Marvin Milier were trying to show that the controversial outfielder should have been placed on the disabled list for 'emotional reasons," rather than suspended indefinitely without pay for what the club called lack of effort.

Yastrzemski's Hit Nips Orioles

By Sam Goldaper

NEW YORK, Sept. 1 (NYT) .-There was a time when Carl Yastrzemski was a hallowed name in Boston baseball. No one would have thought to boo the 32-yearold three-time American League batting champion and youngsters were proud to wear shirts and purchase anything he endorsed.

But the worst batting slump in Yastrzemski's 11-year, majorleague career has changed much

Every time Yastrzemski went to the plate last night against the Baltimore Orioles in Boston, the crowd of 26,040 greeted him with loud boots and catcalls. His .259 batting average apparently was

But Yastrzemski, it seems, has been around too long to be bothered by that. The cure-all for booing was his two-out, ninthinning single that gave the Red Sox a 4-3 victory.

Athletics 4, Angels 1

Reggie Jackson snapped a tie with a 400-foot double and Rick Monday followed with a two-run triple as Oakland scored three times in the eighth and beat California, 4-1, at Anaheim, Calif. John (Blue Moon) Odom, with relief help from Darold Knowles, won his tenth game.

Tigers 6, 3, Indians 1. 6

Home runs by Graig Nettles and Chris Chambliss accounted for five runs and Sam McDowell made a rare relief appearance as Cleveland beat Detroit, 6-3, for a split of a doubleheader at Detroit. The Tigers won the opener, 6-1, with Norm Cash driving in four runs on a homer and a single and Joe Coleman pitching a four-hitter for his 15th victory.

"Now children. Buchwald

the first subject is arithmetic. I'm going to give you a problem. If someone was promised B raise of 10 percent oo 7,000 dollars a year at the beginning of B school term, and at the last minute it was reschided, how much money would she have been cheated out of?"

One of the children raises his hand, "Seven hundred dollars." 'That's correct, Anthony, Now here is the second problem. A person has gone to college for five years to learn a profession. When she comes out of school she makes half as much money as a plumber. If a plumber makes 15,000 dollars a year, how much will the college graduate make?"

The children work silently for five minutes. Theo Susan raises

60 Nations Are Taking Part in U.S. Concerts

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1 (AP). -An orchestra of musicians recruited from 60 nations plus 34 of the United States and the District of Columbia will play three concerts in New York, Florida and Washington in late October,

They will play under auspices of the Federation of People-to-People Programs, Inc. Dr. William B. Welsh, vice-chairman of the federation, announced plans for the concerts, under the musical direction of Arthur Fledler of the Bostoo Symphony, at 2

Dr. Walsh said the project is being financed through contributions from individuals, corpora-tions, labor unions and the Walt Disney organization which originsted the idea.

dollars." "If she's lucky," the teacher says. "One more. If the cost of living went up 7 percent in one year, and a person could not get an increase in her salary because of government bureaucrais, how much less would her salary be worth in three years?"

Johnny pipes up: "21 percent." "All right, you seem to know your arithmetic. Let's go on to English. Which of these two sentences is correct? President Nixon's economic game plan were R failure, or President Nixon's economic game plan was a failure?'"

Charles replies, "was a failure." "The people who were caught in a wage-price freeze are those who could least afford it' or The people who were caught in a wage-price freeze is those who could least afford it?"

"What is wrong with this sentence: 'American economists don't know nothing?"

Carol replies: "It should read 'American economists don't know

Twiggy as Polly Browne in Ken Russell's filmed version of "The Boy Friend." "Everyone knows I'm skinny . . . I know I'm skinny."

Twiggy: 'I'm Not an Actress. I'm Just Me'

ONDON CHT1.-Here She Is-The New Face of The Year, screeched the Daily Express: TWIGGY! The year was 1966 and Twiggy was 16 and a half years old. This month she'll be 22. She hasn't modeled for over R year and she Do longer gets the best table in American restaurants, says her discoverer, Justin de Villeneuve. "Imagine!" says Justin. "When she came in people used to stand up on their chairs and applaud."

"The first time in America was hard," says Twiggy. "I nearly got squashed. I had a couple of scary experiences. Not with people being swful, with people being nice.

Justin's studio is in a converted warehouse near London's Post Office Tower. Justin, as he opens the door, is triendly and full of bounce, "I'm Jay de Vee!" he says, sticking out his hand. He wears a greeo shirt and trousers. Twiggy found his matching green sneakers, which he is very proud of, at Escalade.

The living room has to be something. and it is: 300 yards of hand-blocked Indian fabric draped into R wondrous tall tent. "I used to be a photographer. I only took pictures lying on my back so I needed a ceiling at least 12 feet high." Justin explains. There are cushions everywhere, incense and, in the gloaming, Twiggy, sweetly stately in a purple dress, Twiggy and Justin are gracious hosts at dinner; cold artichoke, spaghetti with clam sauce, crepes stuffed with banana cream, rin mousseux with ice. Franco, who used to be at San Lorenzo, cooks and serves and the talk is of boutiques: Escalade, Biba's men's section. Brown's-"they're having a sale, one-half off," Twiggy says—where you can get Missoni knitwear, Mr. Freedom, where the food has got much better, Victoria and Albert, "They closed ages ago. They had Egyptian stuff," says Twiggy. And there is Mr. Chow's new snack bar where the customers wear stereo earphones and the waltresses wear kimonos—"it's like a Chinese restaurant in Japan."

After dinner everyone settles on Friend'. I know I'll say, Look how skinny cushions and listens to records. Twiggy snoozes through Loog John Baldry's resounding "Don't Lay No Boogie-Woogle on the King of Rock and Roll," hut swakens for Graham Nash's gentle "Songs for Beginners."

"Just want to hold you, don't want to hold you down." sings Nash. "That's lovely," says Twiggy.

At 7:15 a.m. Justin is driving Twiggy in her Mini out to Elstree Studios, where she is making her acting debut in Ken Russell's musical, "The Boy Priend." She is said to be terrific. She spent nearly a year preparing. Singing in public was the worst, but she says the playback is all right: "It sounds very period." Even at 7:15 am, she is astonishingly beautiful. rather dispassionate about herself as great models sometimes are, with a lovely stillness and dimity

She is laconic and down to earth in speech, still unearthly in looks—a life-long chrysalis perhaps, though Justin says she is much changed. "She's much tougher now, she's had to put up with so much nonsense."

"The Boy Friend" set has been dif-ficult and unpleasant. Twiggy has risen above the problems to win praise from all factions. Justin, who is billed as Production Associate, has been barred from the set. Twiggy must be as aware as anyone that no top model has made the switch to top actress, but she is unruffled.

"I'm not BD actress," she says. "I'm just me. I don't look at the part the same way. I wouldn't want to be an actress that people call up and say will you do this. I wouldn't want to be on the stage. I understand the camera, it's the eod of the stick I've always been at.
"I look forward to seeing "The Boy

I am. It's silly because everyone knows I'm skinny. I know I'm skinny."

In a security-mad world, Twiggy and Justin wing it, choosing interests as they come along. After "The Boy Friend" they plan to do another musical which Justin will produce and help write. "The next one is a lovely idea," says Twiggy. "After that I don't know."

Asked what she wants from work, Twiggy is surprised but interested (all she is usually asked is what she ate for breakfast and how she stays slim, Justin later explained). "I don't know," she says finally. "The product is important." The car pulls up at the film studio and Twiggy quickly hops out. "O.K. Princess, good-hye," says Justin.

Tve takeo a lot of nonsense on this film," he says, heading back to town, but I know Twiggy will come out a winner. Come Christmas she'll he the greatest thing in films."

Twiggy never had it rough, she never had to take her pictures around-Jean Shrimpton, those girls, they carried their pictures around. She never had to fight for anything. In the background there was this terrible monster. Me. Actually, I'm the softest person in the world. A lot of people have the impression I'm Mr. Svengali. Deals, deals, deals. We do things as we get interested, that way we always win." Some of those who have watched Twiggy grow think that a time may come when, despite her loyalty, Justin will be less in the picture.

"I hope to marry her at the end of this year," Justin says. "Twiggy wants to wait until she's 25. I think it's because she has a sister who married and divorced coung. "But I think it will be this year. Unless Twiggy has in her mind that she wants to do everything and at 25 cut out. I don't know. "I believe in Twiggy. And Twiggy be-
